STUDENTS TO LEARN OF SCHOOLS IN SCHOOLS

How much will attending high school and college help a student's earning power? How much does it cost to replace a broken window in a school? Such diverse questions as these are being considered in three eighth grade classes in the Torrance Unified School District as part of a pilot study on teaching about the public schools in the public schools.

John Dunworth, principal of Casimir Elementary School, is making a doctoral study of the effects of teaching a unit about the public school as part of the school curriculum. Although schools have taught students about the police, fire, and other city departments, they never have included much about the public schools.

Students will learn how the schools operate, who runs them, how methods compare with those a few years ago, and the costs involved.

Dunworth's study tests the attitude of students and their parents toward the schools both before and after the unit is taught. A questionnaire is sent to parents to find out what they know and their attitude about the schools.

Classes studying this unit are at Wood, Carr, and Casimir Schools. Dunworth believes that the study will make students appreciate their educations more and will help them to understand why they are going to school.

Board Seeks Sidewalks to South High

The Torrance Unified School District will ask the city to put sidewalks in areas where students will walk, adjoining the new South High School.

The school board voted the request Tuesday night after getting a letter from the Hollywood Riviera Homeowners' Assn. seeking support in a drive to get sidewalks along Pacific Coast Hwy. between Paseo de las Delicias and Calle Mayor.

The school district cannot build sidewalks off school property and asked the city to put sidewalks on the north side of Pacific Coast Hwy. from Calle Mayor to the school, along the north side of Newton St. from 242nd St. to the Ellinwood area, and at the spot asked by the Riviera Homeowners.
